DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. The declaration under 37 CFR 1.132 filed 1 May 2007 is sufficient to overcome the rejection of claims 1-23 based upon Cao et al.
2. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-33 and 35 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

3. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

4. Claims 13-23, 30-33, and 35 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 13-23, 30-33, and 35 are directed to "a computer-readable medium". However, the term "computer-readable medium" is defined by the specification as including "communication media", which comprises carrier waves, modulated data signals, wireless media, etc. (see page 7, lines 16-30 of specification). Therefore, the claimed "computer-readable media" encompasses signals encoded with functional descriptive material and is not statutory. That is, a signal encoded with functional descriptive material is not a process, machine, composition of matter, or manufacture.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

6. Claims 13-15 and 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kohen et al. (Estimating Word Translation Probabilities from Unrelated Monolingual Corpora Using the EM Algorithm).

In regard to claim 13, Kohen et al. disclose a computer-readable medium having computer-executable instructions for performing steps comprising:

receiving a string of words in a source language (candidate noun sequence, page 3, 2nd column, Outline section);

transforming the string of words into a transformed representation using an iterative algorithm (translation probabilities for the string of words are generated using the iterative EM algorithm, page 3, 2nd column, Estimation of Translation Probabilities section);

using the transformed representation to score strings of words in the target language (the translation probabilities are used to score the translations, page 4, 1st column, Application section).

Art Unit: 2626

In regard to claim 14, Kohen et al. disclose selecting a string of words in the target language based on the score (the highest scoring translation is selected as the translation of a string of words, page 4, 1st column, Application section).

In regard to claim 15, Kohen et al. disclose identifying pages containing the selected string of words in the target language as relevant to the string of words in the source language (a web search is conducted to identify counts of words in the target language, page 2, 2nd column, final paragraph to page 3, 1st column, 1st full paragraph).

In regard to claim 23, Kohen et al. disclose the iterative algorithm is an expectation-maximization algorithm (EM algorithm, page 3, 2nd column, Estimation of Translation Probabilities section).

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claims 1-12 and 24-29 are allowed.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

In regard to claims 1-12, since the Chao reference has been overcome by the declaration filed under 35 U.S.C. 1.132, Koehn et al. is now the closest prior art of record. Claim 1 requires "transforming a representation of context words in a source language into a transformed representation of context words in the target language". Koehn et al. do not disclose or suggest "a representation of context words in a source language" which is transformed. Rather, Koehn et al. base their models upon direct representations of context words in the target language (see page 3, 1st column, 3rd full paragraph).

Regarding claims 24-29, the combination of Itoh et al. and Chin et al. does not disclose or suggest "providing two possible translations for a word to at least two clients" so that the two clients can, in effect, vote on a correct translation for the word. While Itoh et al. allows a single user to select a correct translation, the translation is stored in a user specific dictionary. Therefore, there is no motivation to allow additional user's to influence a particular user's personal dictionary.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
